

PR

4518

.C1605

W. L. Andrews
PRICE 15 CENTS.

DE WITT'S ACTING PLAYS.

(Number 219.)

THE
CHIMNEY CORNER.

AN ORIGINAL DOMESTIC DRAMA,
IN TWO ACTS,

BY H. T. CRAVEN.

Author of "Milky White," "Miriam's Crime," "The Post Boy," "Philomel."

As First Performed at the Royal Olympic Theatre, London,
Feb. 21, 1861.

TO WHICH ARE ADDED,

A description of the Costumes—Synopsis of the Piece—Cast of the Characters —Entrances and Exits—Relative Positions of the Performers on the Stage, and the whole of the Stage Business.

New-York :

CLINTON T. DE WITT, PUBLISHER,

No. 33 Rose Street.

NOW READY.

 A COMPLETE DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF DE WITT'S ACTING
PLAYS, AND DE WITT'S ETHIOPIAN AND COMIC DRAMAS, containing Plot, Costume, Scenery, Time of Representation, and every other information, mailed free and post-paid.

Monograph

DE WITT'S ACTING PLAYS.

 Please notice that nearly all the Comedies, Farces and Comediettas in the following list of DE WITT'S ACTING PLAYS are very suitable for representation in small Amateur Theatres and on Parlor Stages, as they need but little extrinsic aid from complicated scenery or expensive costumes. They have attained their deserved popularity by their droll situations, excellent plots, great humor and brilliant dialogues, no less than by the fact that they are the most perfect in every respect of any edition of plays ever published either in the United States or Europe, whether as regards purity of the text, accuracy and fulness of stage directions and scenery, or elegance of typography and clearness of printing.

* * * In ordering please copy the figures at the commencement of each piece, which indicate the number of the piece in "DE WITT'S LIST OF ACTING PLAYS."

 Any of the following Plays sent, postage free, on receipt of price—15 cents each.

 The figure following the name of the Play denotes the number of Acts. The figures in the columns indicate the number of characters—M. male; F. female.

No.		M.	F.	No.		M.	F.
75.	Adrienne, drama, 3 acts.....	7	3	21.	Dreams, drama, 5 acts.....	6	3
114.	Anything for a Change, comedy, 1 act.....	3	3	186.	Duchess de la Valliere, play, 5 acts... 6	4
167.	Apple Blossoms, comedy, 3 acts.....	7	3	47.	Easy Shaving, farce, 1 act.....	5	2
93.	Area Belle (The), farce, 1 act.....	3	2	135.	Everybody's Friend, comedy, 3 acts. 6	5
40.	Atchi, comedietta, 1 act.....	3	2	200.	Estranged, an operetta, 1 act.....	2	1
89.	Aunt Charlotte's Maid, farce, 1 act... 3	3		103.	Faust and Marguerite, drama, 3 acts, 9	7
192.	Game of Cards (A), comedietta, 1 act. 3	1		9.	Fearful Tragedy in the Seven Dials, interlude, 1 act.....	4	1
166.	Bardell vs. Pickwick, sketch, 1 act. 6	2		128.	Female Detective, drama, 3 acts.....	11	4
41.	Beautiful Forever, farce, 1 act.....	2	3	101.	Fernande, drama, 3 acts.....	11	10
141.	Bells (The), drama, 3 acts.....	9	3	99.	Fifth Wheel, comedy, 3 acts.....	10	2
67.	Birthplace of Podgers, farce, 1 act... 7	3		145.	First Love, comedy, 1 act.....	4	1
36.	Black Sheep, drama, 3 acts.....	7	5	102.	Foiled, drama, 4 acts.....	9	3
160.	Blow for Blow, drama, 4 acts.....	11	6	88.	Founded on Facts, farce, 1 act... 4	2
70.	Bonnie Fish Wife, farce, 1 act.....	3	1	74.	Garrick Fever, farce, 1 act.....	7	4
179.	Breach of Promise, drama, 2 acts... 5	2		53.	Gertrude's Money Box, farce, 1 act. 4	2
25.	Broken-Hearted Club, comedietta, 1 act. 4	8		73.	Golden Fetter (Fettered), drama, 3	11	4
24.	Cabman, No. 93, farce, 1 act.....	2	2	30.	Goose with the Golden Eggs, farce, 1 act.....	5	3
1.	Caste, comedy, 3 acts.....	5	3	131.	Go to Putney, farce, 1 act.....	4	3
69.	Caught by the Cuff, farce, 1 act.....	4	1	28.	Happy Pair, comedietta, 1 act.....	1	1
175.	Cast upon the World, drama, 5 acts. 10	5		151.	Hard Case (A), farce, 1 act.....	2	2
55.	Catharine Howard, historical play, 3 acts.....	12	5	8.	Henry Dunbar, drama, 4 acts.....	10	3
80.	Charming pair, farce, 1 act.....	4	3	180.	Henry the Fifth, historical play, 5	38	5
65.	Checkmate, comedy, 2 acts.....	6	5	19.	He's a Lunatic, farce, 1 act.....	3	2
68.	Chevalier de St. George, drama, 3	9	3	60.	Hidden Hand, drama, 4 acts.....	5	5
76.	Chops of the Channel, farce, 1 act. 3	2		187.	His Own Enemy, farce, 1 act.....	4	1
149.	Clouds, comedy, 4 acts.....	8	7	174.	Home, comedy, 3 acts.....	4	3
121.	Comical Countess, farce, 1 act.....	3	1	64.	Household Fairy, sketch, 1 act... 1	1
107.	Cupboard Love, farce, 1 act.....	2	1	190.	Hunting the Slipper, farce, 1 act... 4	1
152.	Cupid's Eye-Glass, comedy, 1 act... 1	1		191.	High C, comedietta, 1 act.....	4	2
52.	Cup of Tea, comedietta, 1 act.....	3	1	197.	Hunchback (The), play, 5 acts.....	14	2
148.	Cut off with a Shilling, comedietta, 1 act.....	2	1	18.	If I Had a Thousand a Year, farce, 1 act.....	4	3
113.	Cyrill's Success, comedy, 5 acts.....	10	4	116.	I'm Not Meself at All, original Irish stew, 1 act.....	3	2
199.	Captain of the Watch (The), comedietta, 1 act.....	4	2	129.	In for a Holiday, farce, 1 act.....	2	3
20.	Daddy Gray, drama, 3 acts.....	8	4	159.	In the Wrong House, farce, 1 act... 4	2
4.	Dandelion's Dodges, farce, 1 act... 4	2		122.	Isabella Orsini, drama, 4 acts.....	11	4
22.	David Garrick, comedy, 3 acts.....	8	3	177.	I Shall Invite the Major, comedy, 1	4	1
96.	Dearest Mamma, comedietta, 1 act. 4	2		100.	Jack Long, drama, 2 acts.....	9	2
16.	Dearest than Life, drama, 3 acts... 6	5		139.	Joy is Dangerous, comedy, 2 acts... 3	3
58.	Deborah (Leah) drama, 3 acts.....	7	6	17.	Kind to a Fault, comedy, 2 acts... 6	4
125.	Deerfoot, farce, 1 act.....	5	1	86.	Lady of Lyons, play, 5 acts.....	12	5
71.	Doing for the Best, drama, 2 acts... 5	3		72.	Lame Excuse, farce, 1 act.....	4	2
143.	Dollars and Cents, comedy, 3 acts... 9	4

THE
CHIMNEY CORNER.

An Original Domestic Drama,

IN TWO ACTS.

BY H. T. CRAVEN.

Author of "Milky White," "Miriam's Crime," "The Post Boy," "Philomel."

AS FIRST PERFORMED AT THE ROYAL OLYMPIC THEATRE, LONDON,
FEB. 21, 1861.

TO WHICH ARE ADDED

A DESCRIPTION OF THE COSTUME—CAST OF THE CHARACTERS—EN-TRANCES AND EXITS—RELATIVE POSITIONS OF THE PERFORMERS ON THE STAGE, AND THE WHOLE OF THE STAGE BUSINESS.

NEW YORK:
CLINTON T. DE WITT, PUBLISHER,
No. 33 ROSE STREET.

187-?

CAST OF CHARACTERS.

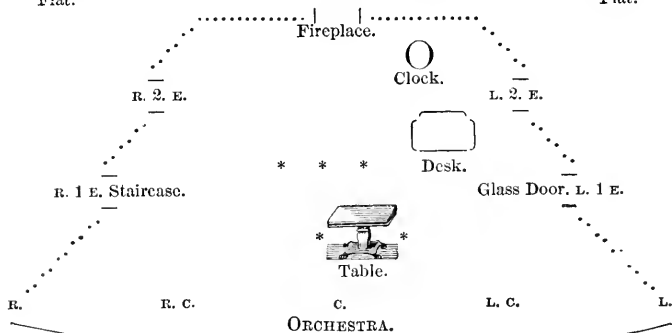

*Royal Olympic Theatre,
London, Feb. 21, 1881.*

Solomon Probity (aged 91).....	Mr. H. WIGAN.
Peter Probity (aged 60).....	Mr. F. ROBSON.
JOHN PROBITY (aged 23).....	Mr. W. GORDON.
Mr. Charles CHETTY.....	Mr. G. MURRAY.
Sifter.....	Mr. H. COOPER.
Patty Probity (wife of Peter).....	Mrs. LEIGH MURRAY.
Grace Emery.....	Miss HUGHES.

TIME OF REPRESENTATION—ONE HOUR AND FORTY MINUTES.

SCENERY.

ACT I., Scene.—Interior of a little parlor at the back of a small chandler's shop, in the vicinity of London; a glass door opening into the shop, L. 2 E., over this, a portrait of a little boy; an entrance and practicable staircase, which terminates on the stage, 2 E. R.; cupboard, R.; stage boxed in; an air of comfort pervades the furnishing, though the articles are of an old-fashioned and humble description. In Flat. Flat.

the c. of flat, a fireplace and cheerful fire, on which, and on the hob, are saucepans, and plates before the fire; over the mantel-piece (on which are several commonplace ornaments), is a looking-glass, on either side of the glass, some low art specimens of family portraiture; a few antiquated prints are variously arranged on the walls, R. and L.; an old chest of drawers, with a desk top, stands L., beyond the door; a table, L. c. (on which is a lighted candle); some half dozen chairs (some easy); clock, L. of fire-place; drugget, partially covering the floor.

A fortnight is supposed to elapse between Acts I. and II.

ACT II., Scene.—Same as Act I. scene, except that furniture is arranged somewhat differently, being a contrast to the former Act, in which an air of comfort was observable; the room now seems neglected and untidy.

GIFT

EST. OF J. H. CORNING

JUNE 20. 1940

COSTUMES.

PETER.—First dress : Old fashioned black dress coat, black satin vest, dark trousers, quaint looking hat with crape hat-band, black gloves, umbrella.

Second dress : Drab shop coat, and grocer's long apron.

SOLOMON.—Long loose black coat, drab breeches, gray stockings and large ankle boots.

CHARLES.—Fashionable suit of black.

JOHN.—Black frock coat, gray trousers and vest.

SIFTER.—Suit characteristic of a town traveler.

PATTY.—Blue gown, white apron and cap.

GRACE.—black silk dress and mantle, black bonnet.

PROPERTIES.

Saucepans and plates ; common mantel ornaments ; old-fashioned clock ; lighted candles ; drugget ; pencil and memorandum book for SIFTER ; small packages of papers, to be in desk-top of chest of drawers ; pocket-handkerchief, an old canary-colored silk preferable ; large black pocket-book for PETER PROBITY, with several sovereigns and a number of bank-notes ; japanned cash-box, to lock ; apron for PETER ; Irish stew, to be taken from saucepan on fire : table-cloth ; basin of gruel ; jug, for boy ; will, for PETER to read from ; knife and fork for PETER, to throw down at table ; supper things on table, including a bottle of onions ; long clay pipe, to smoke, for PETER ; note for JOHN, to place in SOLOMON's hand ; money wrapped up in paper, for JOHN to take from desk ; bundle of wood ; spectacles for PETER ; account book for PETER ; letter for postman to send in.

SYNOPSIS.

SOLOMON PROBITY, in his ninety-first year, is living with his son PETER, a chandler in moderate circumstances. PETER has a good wife, PATTY, and an excellent son, JOHN. PETER had been left joint executor to the estate, and guardian to the person, of a very pretty and amiable girl, Miss GRACE EMERY. But her father having heard something to the detriment of JOHN PROBITY, his old friend's son, has made a codicil to his will, insisting that GRACE should marry CHARLES CHETTY, or forfeit a large sum of money. The other guardian was the father of this CHARLES, and JOHN was a clerk in their law office. The lawyer believed that JOHN PROBITY had committed a forgery on their house, and had even told Mr. Emery of it ; hence the codicil alluded to. GRACE, however, never faltered in her faith in JOHN's integrity, and discountenanced CHARLES CHETTY's overtures of love. The CHETTYS had put a detective on JOHN's tracks ; but meanwhile he, unsuspectingly, kept on the even tenor of his way. While affairs were in this condition, PETER PROBITY, the chandler, sold out a lot of GRACE's securities, and brought the amount of money that he received to his snug little parlor, back of the shop, where he intended keeping it until the next morning. GRACE EMERY is paying the PROBITYS a visit, and before her, and his wife, PETER counts and recounts the notes and the gold, locks it all in a tin cash box, and puts the box in an old desk, surmounting a chest of drawers ; at the same time avowing his intention of sitting up all night for fear of thieves. He is suddenly called away, however, no one staying in the room except the old man, who sits drowsily in the Chimney Corner, scarcely conscious of anything that is going on. Indeed, so dulled are his faculties, that his grandson, JOHN, is the only person that can make him understand anything. When PETER leaves the room, old PROBITY, mumbling something about money and thieves, contrives to drag himself to the desk, clutches the money-box, and cautiously hides it in a hole in the chimney. Then he sinks helplessly into his large stuffed chair. Hardly is he quietly seated, before JOHN PROBITY rushes in; going to the desk, he helps himself to a small package from one of the drawers; runs to his grandfather, shakes the old man's hand affectionately, and puts a note in the feeble fingers. Then, in deep agitation, he leaves the room, and the house. Terrible is the outcry raised by PETER when he returns and finds the box gone. His wife runs in, and is of course deeply agitated at the loss of the money-box. But when old SOLOMON begins talking to himself about JOHN taking money; and they read the paper which the old man holds heedlessly in his hands, they are almost petrified. The note read: "Dearest parents: I hope you will forgive your boy the present rash act. But to see such a treasure possessed by another was more than I could endure, and I have fled; knowing you love me too much to bring me back for a trial which would kill me—" PETER can read no more, but tears the paper to fragments. At intervals SOLOMON utters, in a low, sing-song tone, "John's got the money—took it out of the desk—plenty of money—" The note, and SOLOMON's prattle, convince PETER that his son is the culprit; and father and mother are well-nigh broken-hearted. GRACE persistently refuses the hand of CHARLES CHETTY, and even after hearing all the suspicious circumstances, she will not speak harshly of JOHN. CHARLES CHETTY comes to PETER to demand an accounting for the money that he has received for his ward. While the poor ehandler's agitation is at the greatest, JOHN suddenly enters, and of course proclaims his innocence. But circumstances look too dark against him for even his dear parents to believe him. The son, though, contrives to make old SOLOMON understand a little of what he wants to know, and the grandfather points to the Chimney Corner, where, after some searching, they find the missing box. The young man is also cleared of even the suspicion of wrong in the check case—a fellow clerk having confessed himself the culprit. This removes the only obstacle between him and GRACE. There is a pleasant vein of pure comedy running through the piece, making a charming contrast to the affecting and passionate scenes.

STAGE DIRECTIONS.

R. means Right of Stage, facing the Audience; L. Left; C. Centre; R. C. Right of Centre; L. C. Left of Centre. D. F. Door in the Flat, or Scene running across the back of the Stage; C. D. F. Centre Door in the Flat; R. D. F. Right Door in the Flat; L. D. F. Left Door in the Flat; R. D. Right Door; L. D. Left Door; 1 E. First Entrance; 2 E. Second Entrance; U. E. Upper Entrance; 1, 2 or 3 G. First, Second or Third Grooves.

R.	R. C.	C.	L. C.	L.
----	-------	----	-------	----

 The reader is supposed to be upon the stage facing the audience.

THE CHIMNEY CORNER.

ACT I.

SCENE.—Interior of a little parlor at the back of a small chandler's shop, in the vicinity of London.

SOLOMON PROBITY (a superannuated man, with long white hair, and bent with extreme age), is discovered dozing in a large old-fashioned arm-chair, in the chimney corner, R. of fireplace, his right side being towards the audience.

SIFTER (heard without, L.). Allow me to step inside for a minute or two, I'll write a memorandum of our wholesale figures—thank you, I'll go in!

Enter SIFTER, L., followed by MRS. PROBITY.

MRS. PROBITY (L.). I don't think it's any use, sir; you have been here a great many times, and Peter told you, when he last saw you, as he didn't want anything in your way.

SIFTER (R.). I enjoy a bit of pleasant chat, when I find myself in the neighborhood; remarkably intelligent woman, pleasing manners, and—

MRS. P. Oh, sir, that's flummery.

SIFTER. Flummery! Ah! ah! now I call that intelligent; but, my good lady, I represent a firm who can supply you, or any other good chandler, with soda and potash a hundred and fifty per cent. cheaper than any house in London. (takes pencil and book out of his pocket and sits R. of table) Snug little room this.

MRS. P. Yes, sir; it is, sir.

SIFTER. Ah, very snug! let's see—potash at—hem—hum—all your family quite well, Mrs. P.?

MRS. P. Quite well, sir.

SIFTER. And your son—you have a son, haven't you?

MRS. P. Yes, sir; he's in a lawyer's office.

SIFTER. Dear me, a nice comfortable home for him. Few sons have such a home—no, indeed; and there's his desk, too, eh? (pointing to drawers, L.)

MRS. P. Yes, sir; when he has any overwork, he does it there.

SIFTER. Just so; what a nice handy piece of furniture: I've often wished to purchase something of this sort. (gets up and opens top) Ah, there's capital nooks for your son's papers; all these his papers?

MRS. P. Some his, and some his father's; we have no secrets here.

SIFTER. I dare say not—I dare say not. (handling the papers, and carelessly opening the little drawers) Secret drawers, though, eh?

MRS. P. There, sir, shut it up; there's nothing worth seeing, and if you'll just write down what you want—(a bell attached to the exterior shop door is heard, L.)

SIFT. There, you're wanted. (sits) Don't mind me!

MRS. P. Coming!

[Exit, L. door.]

SIFT. Old fellow there asleep. (rises and goes again to the desk, which he has just opened, when MRS. PROBITY'S voice is again heard.)

MRS. P. (outside). Come in, come in, my darling! (SIFTER suddenly closes the desk and resumes his seat.)

Re-enter MRS. PROBITY, followed by GRACE EMERY, who is dressed in deep mourning.

MRS. P. (c.). So Peter had to stay in the city, and sent you here by yourself? You're tired, I dare say? (to SIFTER) Now, sir, if you'll give me your card you needn't stay.

SIFT. (R.). Never mind, I'll call again to-morrow morning; come and have a long chat with you. (crosses to L.) Good-by, for the present.

[Exit, L.]

MRS. P. (R.). An impudent fellow, forcing himself into people's private parlors. These town travellers have the impudence of the old 'un; excuse me, dear.

GRACE (L.). I shall have to trouble Peter to go into the city with me again to-morrow.

MRS. P. (takes chair, R.). There, sit down, (they sit) you must be tired with your long journey. Of course, there's a deal of business to be done, what with consoling—buying out and selling in, investing and transferring, and all that; lor' bless me, I don't understand it a bit, but my old man does. The idea of your poor father leaving my Peter sole executor and your—trustee, don't they call it? It makes my foolish old hubby quite proud; he fancies he's a great man.

GRACE. I'm glad it is so, Patty; I love him as a father—better, I may say, than my own father, whom I had not seen for twelve years, when he came home to die. But Peter looked after me all the time I was at boarding-school, and I know, Patty, I'm in the hands of a good, honest man.

MRS. P. That he is, dear, although he's only a chandler's shop-keeper; but bless you, he knows a deal about money matters, and speculations and scrip. He lost all he had saved two years ago, by investments, so he ought to know something about 'em.

GRACE. Recollect, I have no friends in the world now but you and—perhaps Mr. Chetty, my late father's lawyer.

SOLOMON (seated at back, R. c.). The great frost was in 'fourteen!

MRS. P. (to GRACE). I wonder if father will know you. (both rise, MRS. PROBITY goes up to SOLOMON and bawls in his ear) This is Grace Emery—Grace Emery! You know Grace, don't you?

SOL. The great frost was in eighteen fourteen!

MRS. P. He's a great age—turned ninety; and he can't recollect one instant what he has done the instant before; he asks for his tea five minutes after he's had it, though at times he's knowing enough, I can tell you.

GRACE. Look! he's noticing me now.

MRS. P. (bawling in his ear). This is Grace Emery.

SOL. Has Grace got the money her father left her?

MRS. P. There! did you ever? Now he's picked that up somehow. Bless you, he hears and notices things when we little think it.

SOL. There was a hailstorm in Norfolk the day her father was born—did a deal of damage to the blossom.

MRS. P. There's a memory.

SOL. Where's my hankeycher?

MRS. P. Here in your hand! (to GRACE) He can't remember a thing. Kiss him, and see what he'll say; he likes to be made much of, I can tell you.

GRACE. Here's a snuff-box I've brought you as a present; (places it in his hand) and, I'm going to kiss you. (kisses him.)

SOL. They tell me things are very forward this year.

GRACE. Oh, dear! there's a rub!

MRS. P. (bowling). She kissed you, you ought to be very proud—a pretty girl like her. (pointing to GRACE.)

SOL. Fine wench! fine wench! be getting a husband soon—yes—yes—stormy wether set in after that. (turns to the fire.)

MRS. P. Now, take off your bonnet, my love, and make yourself comfortable. Peter will be home soon with your money, and then we'll have a bit of supper. (the shop bell rings) There's somebody in the shop. (looking through window of the door) Ah! it's John—my son John, just come from the office. Poor fellow, he has been very low-spirited lately; and we can't cheer him up, do what we will.

Enter JOHN PROBITY, L.

Come in John: here's Grace, come to stay all night. Isn't she looking well? (goes up, L.)

JOHN (L). Grace here! I—I didn't know that——

GRACE (R., comes to c., holding out her hand to JOHN). How do you do, John? You are not angry at my intrusion, are you?

SOL. (at back, talking to himself). Yarmouth bloaters don't all come from Yarmouth.

JOHN. Angry, Grace! and with you! I wish I could be; at least I wish I could be indifferent; that's better than being angry.

SOL. (to himself). I know what bloaters are.

JOHN (goes round at back to SOLOMON). Good evening, grandfather.

SOL. Ah, John? There—there's Grace Emery there—fine girl—you're a fine boy—my boy's boy. Kiss her; kiss her—she kissed me—kiss her!

MRS. P. (L. C.). Now, did you ever? Oh, he's the wickedest old man sometimes; you've no idea how he goes on; but we don't take any notice of him.

SOL. Where's my pocket hankeycher?

JOHN. Here in your hand, grandfather.

SOL. (looking in his other hand). What's this?

JOHN. A snuff-box.

MRS. P. Grace gave it to him; he's forgot all about that. (shop bell rings.)

VOICE (without, L). Half a pound of mottled soap, please.

MRS. P. Half a pound of mottled soap—yes, ma'am, I'm coming.

[Exit, door L.]

JOHN (coming down R.). Grace, this is a very humble roof to shelter you. I fear you will feel rather degraded.

GRACE (who has been sitting, R. C., rises). Degraded, John? I'm under the roof of an honest man, and what is more, my dear friend. I hope the education which my father bestowed upon me will never make me ashamed of those who have a claim upon my love.

JOHN (sighs). Ah!

GRACE. Nor would it become you, John, to blush at the home which might have been grander if your father had been less liberal in fitting you for a superior position.

JOHN. I trust I am not wanting in gratitude or affection, but I sometimes think I might have been happier had I been apprenticed to a tradesman, instead of being a superior drudge in a lawyer's office. My father and yours were both uneducated; but yours realized money, and mine is respected for his honesty; many men of education fail to achieve those ends.

SOL. (to himself). Don't tell me! It was Blucher as won Waterloo.

GRACE (L.). Honesty, John, will always be an aid to advancement.

JOHN (R.). It seems not; for in Chetty's office I can't help feeling I am treated with a degree of suspicion which I don't deserve. I wish I were far away from this place. I have nothing here to hope for.

GRACE. Your parents surely deserve your thoughts.

JOHN. They do; but in my present position I know that I can never assist them.

SOL. Where is my hankeycher?

GRACE. There, in your hand! (to JOHN) Poor old man; how his faculties fail him!

SOL. You and John ought to marry. Fine young fellow! I was like him five year ago!

GRACE (turning away from SOLOMON, goes down R.). How absurdly he talks.

JOHN (L.). Absurdly, indeed! And yet, Grace, at one time I thought—that is—I hoped that——

GRACE. What, John?

JOHN. No matter; I can tell you nothing more than you have long known; don't turn from me, Grace; I am not pleading for a return of—it cannot be. Before the cruel sentence in your father's will forbade our union, I had felt how hopeless was my—love. You are engaged to another; I know it. For any recklessness in my future conduct, judge not harshly.

GRACE. Oh, John—if—but there; take my hand; we must try and be sincere friends. I will think of you as my brother.

JOHN. Think of me as one trying in absence to forget the first grief of his life. I can never look upon you the wife of—of—(going up for his hat.)

GRACE. Don't reproach me. I have prayed for fortitude to adopt the path of duty.

JOHN. Grace, do you love him?

GRACE. You have no right to ask that, John. I am obeying my father's dying wish.

JOHN. I have told you I am not pleading for myself; I have abandoned all hope; but pause, unless you are sure of this man's love.

GRACE. What other motive can he have? To him my money must appear an insignificant trifle.

JOHN. Yet my impression is, that if that money were lost to you, you would never become his wife.

GRACE. For shame, John; you speak at random; you have no cause for saying so.

JOHN. Did you know how insulting and suspicious his conduct has been to me, you would not think I was bound to conceal my thought of him. But his tyranny is over; I have endured it long enough.

GRACE. Have you never merited his suspicions?

JOHN. Grace!

GRACE. I mean, has he never told you why he thus treats you?

JOHN. Never! What do you mean?

GRACE. Is it possible?

SOL. Fauntleroy was executed in eighteen twenty-four.

Re-enter MRS. PROBITY, from shop, L.

MRS. P. Here's Peter coming down the street arm in arm with a policeman. I hope he arn't got into trouble. Run, John, and meet him, there's a good lad. [Exit JOHN, L., followed by MRS. PROBITY.]

GRACE. Poor John! He little knows how deep my regard for him might have been, had it not been for his own conduct. The struggle has been severe, but I hope I have conquered.

PETER (heard without, L.). There, Bobby, B 32, get yourself something to drink; I'm much obleeged to you; I'm safe now in my own castle. Old woman, here I am, literary worth my weight in gold—ha! ha!

Enter PETER PROBITY, L., followed by MRS. PROBITY and JOHN, who goes up and sits L. of fire.

PETER (to GRACE). Ah, Tot!—you're here all right, eh? and I'm here all right; well, two rights can't make a wrong—ha! ha! (giving hat and coat, etc., to MRS. PROBITY, who hangs them up, L.) I toddled off to Lombard street after you left me, and got the stock-broker's check changed—one thousand six hundred and twenty-three pound, seven shillings and eight-pence; think o' that! The banker's clerk, a bald-headed, young-looking, clergyman sort o' fellow, asked me "How I'd have it?" I thought that was as much as to say, "Don't you wish you may get it?" So, says I, "If you haven't got so much in the house, say so." (shop bell rings) Patty, there's a customer for dips, make haste in again, for I want you to see the money; you can judge then what the gold diggings are like. [Exit MRS. PROBITY, door, L.]

But here it is! (pulling a large black pocket-book out of his breast pocket) "You'd like it small, I suppose?" said Mr. Clerk, and shovels me—litera y shovels me fifty-three sovereigns first, and then tosses me three hundred and fourteen fi' pun' notes. (imitating bank style of counting notes) Rather a large way of giving it small.

Re-enter MRS. PROBITY.

Just look here, dowager; three hundred and fourteen fi' pun' notes, pitched at me as if they'd been so many curl papers; bless you, that was Mr. Clerk's deepness. I'll be bound it's given his bank a shaking, to draw all that out at once. Look at 'em, Patty. (placing it on table.)

MRS. P. (L.). Mercy on us; how ever do they find time to make such a quantity!

SOL. (who has just wakened from a doze). Is—is that Grace's money, eh?

PETER. There, now, hark at daddy—he knows. Who'd 'a thought he knew anything about it? (goes up to SOLOMON and bawls at him) Yes, daddy, here it is, as right as ninepence! (comes down again to others) Well, I was nervous enough, I can tell you, at having that in my pocket, so I went and stopped for an hour or two at my friend Whiting's (a gentleman who keeps a milk shop in Burking-house Lane) and thinks I, now if any garotters are a dodging me, I'll tire 'em out. Well, when I got out o' the omnibust just now, seeing some ticket-o'-leave-looking customers hanging about, I goes up to a peeler, "B, 32," and, says I, "I've got property about me to a considerable extent; I give myself in charge for you to see me safe home. I keep a chandler's shop," says I—"and (pompously) I'm sole executor and trustee to a heiress." So he see me safe home—and here I am.

MRS. P. Mercy on us; what are you going to do with it till to-morrow? I shan't sleep a wink.

PETER (C.). Bless you, I shall sit up with it all night; the old rattle in one hand and the poker in the other, ready to defend it to the last grasp. Patty, hand me the cash-box, there's only some tax-papers in it. (MRS. PROBITY gets a small black japanned box from desk, into which PETER carefully places the money and locks it) There, my Japanese, you never afore had so much in your inside. I don't lose sight of you this night.

GRACE (R.). It's a deal of trouble for you, Peter, but I must make it up to you somehow or other.

PETER Trouble, my girl! a trouble for my old friend, Phil Emery's child—a child that we weaned (didn't we, Patty?), and you was uncommon rusty about changing your diet. You was a most lively customer in the middle of the night, and always found your appetite as soon as I'd found my first sleep; and the colds I caught in my legs o' winter nights was awful, through my having to jump out of bed in a flimsy dress, to walk you up and down the room—you was owdacious, you was! but we grew fond o' one another—didn't we? Give me a kiss. (kisses GRACE) I wish you health to enjoy your money, my girl, and may you get a husband as'll husband it. By-the-by, I met Mr. Charles Chetty at the corner of the street, and he says he shall drop in to see you by-and-by. The idea of a gentleman like him coming into my cabin. He'll look like a chandelier in a back kitchen. Patty, get the room titivated; I'll mind the shop till we shut up. (changes coat and puts on apron, R.) You must be tired, old woman; been on your legs all day. I've no hesitation in declaring that a chandler's shop is a very harassing business.

JOHN (coming down, L.). Mr. Charles coming! Father, I shall go out.

PETER (crosses to JOHN). What for, my boy? You're not afeard of meeting your master, are you? An honest lad ought to hold up his head afore a king.

MRS. P. (R.). Besides, you'll wan't your supper, John, dear.

JOHN. No, no! I cannot meet him here—not here! (takes his hat) I have the key; don't sit up. [Exit, L. door—bell heard.

PETER. Poor boy! poor boy! Ah, Tot, I can guess what his trouble is; but he'll get over it—poor lad, poor lad!

GRACE (R.). I am sure he will—I hope so.

PETER (C.). I was in love once, before I knew my old woman. She was number two, bless her. (taking MRS. PROBITY's hand affectionately and kissing her) Number one was no go; and my eyes, how I did fret—lost twenty-one ounces a-day, but I survived it, and compulency set in. It's just like getting over the measles, or any other eruption.

MRS. P. (L.). How you do go on, Peter? (goes up.)

PETER. Well, it is a delicate subject; drop it. (aside to GRACE) She doesn't like to hear about number one. (aloud) Just help Patty to lay the cloth; let's have a bit o' supper. (GRACE assists MRS. PROBITY, who spreads the cloth and places the supper things from cupboard, R., taking Irish stew from saucepan on the fire) I'm as hungry as a wolf on half rations. (shop bell rings) There's the shop! I'll put this Californy away. (places tin box in the escritoir, L., and closes desk—a customer raps impatiently on the counter outside) Coming! You are in a hurry, you are; you ought to be served by machinery. [Exit, L. door.

SOL. Hide it, hide it! I was twice broken into, long ago—long ago! Where's my hankeycher?

PETER (looking in, L.). Patty, are we out of herring, eight for six-penny's?

MRS. P. No ; there's two in the old candle-box under the counter.

[Exit PETER, L.

Now, grandfather, here's your gruel—there, stir it up ; it's nice and thick. (pours out basin of gruel from saucepan on hob, and gives it to SOLOMON.)

SOL. They broke into a house in Cheapside in eighteen nine.

MRS. P. (to GRACE). I don't know what he's talking about ; it's wonderful how he amuses himself with his own thoughts. (bar, bolts, and bell heard.)

Re-enter PETER, L., with a jug in his hand.

PETER. Now, mother, here's the beer. I've shut up ; no more five-farthing customers to-night. Sit down—sit down, Tot. (they sit round the table—GRACE, R., PETER, C., MRS. PROBITY, L.) Now, Tot, a nice bit o' this lobsouse. Ah, many a night, in our bachelor days, have your poor father and me supped together on tripe.

GRACE. On tripe ?

PETER. Yes, on tripe ;—he was in the leather trade then—and talked about our schemes for making money. (helps GRACE) He did manage to make a little in foreign parts. Now, Patty, a bit o' this ? He didn't buy shares in the Llanfrothy Copper Mines as I did, with my poor savings, three year ago. Shares that cost me ten pound each, and now wouldn't fetch me ten pence—got eighty of 'em.

MRS. P. Ah, Peter ; you wouldn't take my advice.

PETER. Why, old woman, after I'd done it, and found out my bad bargain, you said you wouldn't have bought them if you'd been me—that was your advice. It's like prophesying, if a man hadn't died he'd a lived. But, there—there—the money's gone—gone—gone ! and I'm a poor man ; but I'm respected for all that ! Ain't I left sole executor and trustee to a heiress, eh, Tot ? (shop bell rings)

MRS. P. (rises, and looks through door window, L.). Oh, lor ! it's Mr. Charles Chetty ! (opens door) Good evening, sir ; won't you honor us by walking in, sir ? Miss Emery is inside, sir.

Enter CHARLES CHETTY, L. D.

PETER (rising, and taking off his apron). Proud to see you, sir, in my humble scantum scantorum. Excuse my speaking Latin so late at night ; proud to see you, sir.

CHARLES (puts hat on desk, and crosses at back to R.). Grace, you see I've found you out. I was determined to come and bid you good-night, as I hadn't seen you to-day. So you've been to the broker's ?

PETER (C.). Sit down, sir, pray. (CHARLES crosses in front, and sits L. of table) Yes, we've been transacting a lot o' business to-day ; sold out o' the three per cents—consols up at ninety-six and three eights—not so bad, eh ? What's your opinion, Mr. Chetty, junior.

CHAS. I don't trouble my head much about consols.

PETER. No—quite so—just so. But as I'm sole executor and trustee, and you're the solicitors to the estate, we ought to take a little interest in it, eh ? Excuse me, you—you know. Would you honor us by trying a bit o' lobsouse ?

SOL. (to himself). I don't like lawyers. All rogues—all rogues !

CHAS. What's that ?

MRS. P. (L.). Oh, it's grandfather, you mustn't mind him ; he doesn't know what he says ; he thinks he's thinking. (goes to SOLOMON and takes away the empty gruel basin.)

CHAS. I wish he'd think more politely.

PETER. It came in very funny, though, didn't it? ha! ha! A wonderful man for turned ninety, eh, Mr Charles?

CHAS. Time he was gone, I should think.

PETER (cating). Well, I don't see it in that way. That old man is my father, and a good father he was to me; we are all fond of him, and if it wasn't out of the course of nature, I should like him to last as long as I lasted, for I should scarcely fancy a home without him. Will you oblige me by taking a bit o' this lobsouse?

CHAS. No, I thank you.

SOL. Our John ought to marry that gal!

CHAS. What does he say?

GRACE. Nothing; don't pay any attention to him, poor old man.

CHAS. I suppose, like children, he repeats the remarks he learns in the family.

PETER. No, Mr. Charles, excuse me; he didn't hear it from us, because, in the first place, he's as deaf as a post.

CHAS. Then you may spare your other reasons.

SOL. Why don't you give me my gruel?

MRS. P. (burlesque to SOLOMON). You've had it—you've eat it! (to CHARLES) He forgets a thing the moment he's done it. John can make him understand better than any of us; he's very proud of John.

PETER. And so, for the matter o' that, are we, Mr. Charles. And now I've the opportunity of saying it, I hope he gives satisfaction in the office, and that when there's an opening you'll give the lad a sort of rise—just to encourage him.

MRS. P. Yes, sir; I'm sure I shall feel grateful if you'll use your interest for the boy, and Grace will be grateful too; won't you, Grace?

PETER. Old woman, I object to that. As far as your being grateful, that's all well and good, but when you hold out Tot's gratitude, it looks like a bribe; and a bribe to a gentleman like Mr. Charles is an insult. By-the-by, Mr. Charles, are you fond of pickled onions?

CHAS. Eh?

PETER. I've some first-raters in the shop, and if you'll put a bottle or two in your pocket—

CHAS. I'm obliged to you—no.

PETER. The object's nothing to me, you know. I buy them wholesale, four bottles at a time. But touching my boy; whether you rise him or not, I know he does his best to deserve it; he's a noble lad, and while we're on that subject, I'm sure you'll not think it out o' place when I say both me and the old woman felt that remark at the bottom of my friend Emery's will very keenly. Phil. Emery, sir, was at one time like my brother, and I shouldn't have expected he would have introduced any slur on the son of the man he thought worthy of making his sole executor and trustee.

CHAS. What is the "slur," as you call it?

PETER. Why this here. I've got a copy of the will here (goes to desk for it) and I'll just read it.

CHAS. (rises). Oh, spare me, Mr. Probity. I like to leave the shop at home.

PETER (returns to table, they sit). Then there's no fear of being charged six-and-eightpence if you open your mouth (of course this is only a little bit of friendly gossip). Here it is. (showing will) Well, after leaving his money and estate in trust to Peter Probity, chandler—that's me—for Grace So-and-so, and so forth, he goes on and declares his last wish that she should marry you, Charles Chetty. That's all fair and above-board; I don't object to that.

CHAS. Thank you!

PETER. This is what sticks in my throat—this here proviser, or codicil, or whatever you call it—that before receiving her legacy, she is required, within one calendar month of her father's death, to make a written declaration never to marry my son John without the consent of your father, or she loses every penny, and all the money is to go into your father's pocket. Now, I say all that's unkind, and I feel it—I feel it!

CHAS. You're getting excited.

PETER. Excited, Mr. Chetty! He's a good lad, and don't ought to have such a slur cast upon him. I'm vain of the boy; and why shouldn't I be? I've spent every rap as I could screw out of my profits on his education, and he does me infamous credit. He's a good, honest, upright boy.

CHAS. For aught you know.

PETER. As I do know. I never heard a word against his conduct; and I want to learn the cause of Emery's insult; for, put it how you will, it is an insult.

CHAS. Well, my good sir, let us drop the subject.

GRACE. Stay! Is it possible, Peter, that you do not know the reason?

CHAS. Let's drop the subject, my dear girl.

GRACE (rises). No! I must know one thing. Peter, is it possible that you have never been told—

PETER. Mercy on us! Told what?

CHAS. In a few words I'll enlighten you. A check from our firm was paid, some seven weeks back, which turned out to be a forgery, and—

PETER (throwing down his knife and fork). What?

CHAS. Mr. John Probity is the only clerk who had access to the check-book, and we—we, in point of fact—rather suspect him.

PETER. And what says my son? What said he, sir?

CHAS. We have never accused him—we did not think it policy to do so.

MRS. P. (crying). I'm sure that my dear boy is as honest as the day. I'm sure—

PETER. Be quiet, old woman! (rises—with trembling voice) And your "policy," sir, is to stand in the way of my boy clearing himself of such an awful suspicion?

CHAS. Well, as it's only a suspicion, you see—

PETER. Only a suspicion!

GRACE. But my father, on his death-bed, and while signing that will, was told, Charles, by Mr. Chetty, that it was proved against him; that John Probity had been guilty of forgery to a large amount.

CHAS. I don't remember that. I am not answerable for my father's words; he might or might not have said so.

GRACE. I heard it; and I was not more shocked than I am now at learning that neither he nor his father were aware of the accusation.

PETER (dashing his fist on the wall). It's accounted for!

MRS. P. (crying). It's a cruel shame—that's what it is!

PETER. Quiet! quiet, old woman! (rises) Take these snapper things away; I've had enough! (pause. PETER goes down R., MRS. PROBITY begins to clear away supper things.)

PETER (R., with assumed calmness). Mr. Charles Chetty—sir—may I respectfully inquire—to—how many has this—suspicion been confided?

CHAS. (rises). Oh, to very few—that is to say—to our principals—and to an official—

PETER. Official! In honest English words, you mean a detective?

CHAS. Well ; in point of fact—yes.

PETER. Patty, (Mrs. PROBITY comes down r) that fellow who has thrust his nose in here so often under pretence of selling potash and soda is a police spy, for whose attentions we are indebted to the kindness of Messrs. Chetty, File & Company. Now look here, Mr. Charles Chetty—you're the son of my son's master, and as such I will treat you with all the respect I can ; but I must speak my mind if I die for it. A simple word expressed in this will that you should be the husband of Grace would have been enough both for me and my son ; besides, I don't wish my boy to be indebted to any woman for his start in the world—we have too much spirit for that.

CHAS. Your manner seems to insinuate that I have not—

PETER. Never mind my insinuating manner. It's my opinion that this foul charge has been trumped up to a dying man—in your favor—to prevent such an event ; and I say, sir—I say (striking the table) it's a scandalous lie ! And till it's proved to be a lie, and apologized for, my son doesn't enter the doors of your office again ! Give me my pipe, old woman ; I want something to calm my nerves ! (goes up, Mrs. PROBITY gives him pipe, etc.)

SOL. Fox was a cunning chap ; but Charley made a mess of it in eighty-three.

CHAS. Very well, Mr. Probity ; I have respected your paternal feelings, and this is what I get by it. (going.)

PETER (at back of table). Stop ! stop ! In this here “ Re Emery, diseased,” you see I am acting with your firm. There's the stock-broker's certificate. (bringing it from desk, with cash-box) I just want you to see that I have the money here all right, or the Lord Chancellor only knows what you may suspect me of. (opens cash-box on table) Look here ; just in the way of business count it, if you please ; you will find sixteen hundred and twenty-three pound, seven shillings and eight-pence.

CHAS. It's no part of my duty to count your notes to-night ; you will please to come with the money to our office to-morrow morning. I wish you a very good evening. Good-bye, Grace ; I will have some explanatory conversation with you to-morrow.

GRACE (r.). Good-night, Mr. Chetty.

PETER (up l. c.). Good-night, sir ; good night. I meant to sit up all night, and a good job I did mean it ; for you've spoilt my sleep for a night or two. Good-bye. Patty, let him out.

[Exeunt Mrs. PROBITY and CHARLES CHETTY, l.—bell heard.]

SOL. There was a great robbery in eighteen one ; four men hanged. (PETER is gathering up the money.)

Re-enter Mrs. PROBITY, l.

Mrs. P. (l.). Oh, Peter ! (casting herself on his neck) My poor John—I wish he'd come home !

PETER (r. c.). So he will ; and it'll all be set right to-morrow ; but, Patty, look here, don't say anything to him to-night ; the lad shan't have his rest disturbed by such an owdacious accusation. No, no—let me break it to him at breakfast to-morrow.

GRACE (r., taking PETER's hand). Take comfort, Peter ; I feel as if a sorrow were removed from my mind ; for it now seems to me certain that John has been unjustly accused.

PETER (kissing GRACE). Thank you for that, Tot ; and I feel as certain of it as that I place my hand upon this tin box, and put it in this here desk. (puts the box inside, but does not shut up desk—SOLOMON is observing PETER's actions from his corner) Though I'm sorry, my lamb, that I've had to offend a gentleman who is likely to be your husband, but as a father, what could I do? (comes down, c.)

GRACE. Say nothing more now, Peter; the last hour has filled my mind with doubts. I wish for rest. Patty, will you show me where I am to sleep? Shall I sleep in my own old room?

MRS. P. Certainly, my darling. Follow me. Here's a candle. (lights one.)

GRACE. Good-night, Peter. Good-night, grandfather. (the fire begins gradually to die out.)

[Exit, up the stairs, R., following MRS. PROBITY.]

PETER (sits R. C., smoking his pipe). It's a credible thing to be able to command one's temper; and I shall instantly promote myself in my own opinion for being so calm—so—Dash him! (breaking his pipe in small pieces) They're lawyers, too—lawyers! Chancery Lane versus Chandler's Shop! I'll trounce 'em! for even lawyers can't take a lad's character away without being trounced—and I'll trounce 'em! Won't I? I will, though. I've got an old law book up stairs—"Law's a Serious Call"—I'll dip into that; and if I don't make a serious call for a thousand pounds damages—(rises) there—there's the fire just out! (Mrs. PROBITY appears on the staircase, R.)

MRS. P. Peter, you've never plugged up the window of the front bed-room, as you said you would; and the draught comes in like anything. The dear girl will catch her death.

PETER. I'll come and do it now; it won't take a minute. Old woman, come here. (Mrs. PROBITY comes down, crying). Now what's the use of your sniveling? Well, you are one of the weakest-mindedest females that ever—there you go again. (kisses her) Cheer up, my girl; we've never allowed anything to trouble us much, and this is only the ghost of a trouble; we shall have forgot all about it in a week.

MRS. P. (crying). No, Peter, I shall never forget it.

PETER. Well, of all the imbesilliness—why, we ought to rejoice—to exult at the insult—because we know it's only a lie. How miserable we should 'a been, old woman, if we'd thought it might 'a been true. Cheer up, mother, (sings) "Cheer up, Sam"—come along—let's be jolly! (going to the stairs, sings) "Away with Me-lancho-ly—there you go again! Well, of all the— [Exit up stairs with MRS. PROBITY.]

SOL. (solus). Hide it! hide it! Deal of money in the box—hide it! (rises from the great arm-chair, from which he has not moved during the scene, with much difficulty, and totters across, peering suspiciously around him; looks into desk, and takes out the cash-box; closes the desk and advances, hugging the box) The thieves shan't have it—they may look—he, he, he! (chuckles) Hide it, hide it! there's a corner up the chimney—I know; two bricks out—up the chimney—up the chimney! (goes to the fireplace, and with much difficulty, from weakness of age, places the box up the chimney) There, they shan't have it! The robbers can't find it—deal of money. Where—where's my hankeycher? I got up to look for my hankeycher. (sinks into arm-chair again) I—I—haven't had my gruel! (bell heard.)

Enter JOHN PROBITY, L. D.

JOHN (in a depressed tone, placing a note upon the table). There, father will see that. By to-morrow I shall be two hundred miles away from London. I cannot stay—nor could I endure a leave-taking. They will eventually know that there may be wisdom even in rashness, for only in absence can I find new energy to battle with the world. I will not stay to see her the wife of another, and he a man I must daily salute as my master—no—no—away! away! the train will start in five minutes (goes up to SOLOMON) Good-bye, grandfather! Bless you! here, give this note to father. (takes the note from the table, places it in SOLOMON'S hand, and speaks in his ear) This note—for father! Now for my little store of money which I have hoarded for this purpose and hidden in this desk. (opens desk and takes out of a secret drawer some money wrapped in a paper) Look, grandfather, I have some money—money! (shows it)

SOL. Yes—yes—money; I see.

JOHN (aside). He will perhaps tell them that, and ease their minds respecting my immediate necessities. Farewell home! farewell, till I can revisit you with a lighter heart!

[Exit, L.—the outside door is heard to shut—bell.]

SOL. Fine young fellow—strapping lad; my John—he's got the money—plenty of money—yes, yes—where—where's my hankeycher? I want my gruel!

Re-enter PETER, down the stairs, R.

PETER (humming a tune). "Bright chanticleer proclaims the dawn"—a scoundrel! I'll trounce him! why, there's my old father there—ninety-one—in nine years he'll be a centurion—and his father—all honest men—we've been noted as an honest family for three generations, and now to be—(sings desperately) "With a heigh ho! tivy tivy! tantivy! tantivy!" I'll make him cry peccavi! (sings) "This day a stag must die!"—and I must find another pipe; can't get on to-night without smoking like a chimney a-fire. Tobacco's a soothative, as the doctors say; so I'll get some nigger-head out of the shop. Lor!—there's the fire quite out—I'll get a bundle of wood; we must try and have him up again. (gets a bundle of wood from L. of fireplace, and begins to put it into firegrate) Daddy! it's bedtime for you; (bawls) Arn't you for Bedfordshire? Bedtime! half-past ten—shall I help you?

SOL. John's just gone out—he—he's got the money.

PETER (lighting the fire). John! nonsense! John went out a long time ago; he'll soon be in now, poor fellow—little guessing what he'll have to hear to-morrow; but we'll trounce 'em! I must get another pipe; I used the other as a vent-peg to my temper. (goes to L. of fireplace for pipe.)

SOL. Hide the money! hide it! lots o' thieves!

PETER. What do you say, daddy?

SOL. The money! the money! (pointing to the desk.)

PETER. Ah! I've left the key in the desk! old daddy can see that; his eye-sight can't be so bad, after all (goes to the desk to lock it) The idea of having to set up and watch such a concern as this cash-box! (looks into the desk) Such a small concern as—this—where is it? where?—I—I surely—yes, I put it in here—(passes his hand over his forehead) Let me think; I—I can't think, I seem bewildered! What shall I do? I can't think! I've flurried myself, and scared away my memory. Did I not place it here? Yes! yes! Where is it? Oh, mercy on me—where? (looking about room) Has—has Patty taken it up stairs?—no—I'm sure I placed it in here; but I'll ask her. (calling up the stairs) Patty! Patty!

Mrs. P. (from above). What's the matter?

PETER. Nothing's the matter, mother; but come down directly, please.

Mrs. P. I'll come.

PETER. Of course it's all right! I'm well aware o' that—it must be here somewhere—but, oh, lor, I'm in a cold perspiration, and feel—ah! ha! I'm such an old fool—feel' ready to faint. It must be all right; but I left the key in the lock—has—has any one been? No—the shop door's snapped. Ha! ha! ha! he! he! how I shall laugh at myself directly, when I find it's all right. What a stew I'm putting myself in about nothing.

SOL. John's got the money—plenty of money—took it out of the desk—plenty of money.

PETER. What? what do you say? John been here? John!

SOL. Yes, took the money and went away.

PETER (crosses to R.). He taken it? he? Oh, to some place of security; but why not tell me? a foolish lad. (to SOLOMON) What's that paper in your hand? (takes the note out of SOLOMON'S hand) This is John's writing—this will explain it all. (opening note) Ha! ha! here's the old woman; the engine comes when the fire's out.

Enter MRS. PROBITY from the staircase, R.

You may go up again, mother, now; but stay! here's something wrote by John. Where's my barnacles?—find my specs, there's a good soul—quick! Ah, now for it. (puts on spectacles and reads) “Dear parents, I trust you will forgive your boy the present rash act——”

MRS. P. What rash act, Peter?

PETER (with a trembling voice). “But to see such a treasure possessed by another, was more than I could endure, and I have fled——”

MRS. P. What does he mean? My boy gone? Peter—Peter, dear, how ghastly you look!

PETER. Here's more! (reads) “I have fled, knowing you love me too much to bring me back to a trial which would kill me——” I'll read no more—cruel boy, as I tear your confession, so have you torn my old heart. (tearing up the paper) You—you have killed me! Oh, Patty! Patty! Patty!

MRS. P. I don't understand his letter.

PETER. But I do! I do now! If this was the last night we had to live it would be well for us. But—but I lose time; give me my coat, hat—quick! quick! (MRS. PROBITY goes up for coat, etc.) I'll follow him to the world's end, though I would rather have followed his coffin—his coffin.

MRS. P. (up L.). Don't talk so dreadfully. What has the poor boy done, Peter?

PETER. What has he done! No! no! believe him good for another hour—one more hour—good by! (aside) Mercy! he will be brought back a felon. (totters as if from faintness.)

MRS. P. Peter! Peter! you are very ill; I see it!

PETER (up L. in a passionate burst). My boy! my boy! would that you lay stiff and cold in the churchyard with your brothers. (music, very piano) My old heart—is—broken—broken. (bursts into hysterical tears and falls upon desk, L.—picture.)

CURTAIN.

ACT II.

SCENE.—The same as Act I. Old SOLOMON'S chair by the fireplace is vacant, the fire out, and the clock stopped.

MRS. PROBITY sits back c. weeping and rocking herself disconsolately in her chair.

MRS. P. A fortnight! a whole fortnight! and my boy has not come back to comfort us.

Enter PETER from the shop, L. He looks haggard and careworn, cravat loose, soiled apron, etc.

PETER. I wish my numerous customers would patronize some rival establishment for a day or two; my brain's a wool-gathering—I don't know what I'm about; my mistakes are something awful. I've given wrong change four times—wrong articles all the morning, and just look this bit of a spurious pewter pot for a half-a-crown. (looks round at Mrs. PROBITY) There, talk about a wreck on the Goodman Sands—look there! That poor creature's rocking herself into the grave! (to her) Patty, Patty, my woman, can't you manage to rouse up a bit?

MRS. P. What have I to live for?

PETER. Well, my woman, I suppose that's not a question for us to decide. When the proper time comes, no doubt we shall have the benefit of the 'Mancipation Act. To be sure there's a November fog of shame and ruin hanging over the chandler's shop; but, (sitting down beside her) we've comforted one another for thirty-five year; we've been, I may say, all the world to each other, and why shouldn't we be now?

MRS. P. (placing her hand in PETER'S). We were never before tried like this, Peter! (shop bell rings.)

PETER (looking through door window). It's her—that poor, wronged girl; when I look at her—(goes up L. H.)

Enter GRACE, bonnet on, L.

GRACE (crosses c. to Mrs. PROBITY). You have thought me unkind that I have not come for so long, but I have been ill, and—Peter—Peter—(beckons him down) how changed you look! Do you then take poor John's departure so much to heart?

PETER (L.). Not so much his departure from us, as his departure from his good name; he's lost that forever!

GRACE (c.). How? Have you, then, reason to think the fearful accusation against him has any foundation?

PETER. I won't tell a falsehood to you, my child; though I have fallen so low that I would lie to the world to save him from—from transp—when I think of that, I can't even listen to the only friend who throws out something like comfort to hold on to.

GRACE. What friend, Peter?

PETER. Conscience, Tot; a clear conscience. I've asked myself if I ever set a bad example to the boy; or if, knowingly, I ever allowed him to see it elsewhere; my conscience says "Never!" (sits L. of table) I think I see him now, a little child on his knees, in his night-gown, lisping his nightly prayer to—(pointing to Mrs. PROBITY) with his tiny hands joined, and—ah, then—then—(in tears, he falls with his head on table.)

GRACE. Let us hope that what he repeated then may yet return to his lips, and bring him back a penitent. He will think of it; for he loved you, I am sure.

MRS. P. (seated, R. C.). Ah, even when a child, he would save up his money out of his own head to make us a little present on our birthdays—

PETER. When he might 'a spent it in toys or toffee.

MRS. P. And kissed us, and bid us many—

PETER. Happy returns of the day. To-morrow's your birthday, Patty. (bitterly) Happy returns!

MRS. P. Oh, Peter! (both crying—the shop bell rings.)

PETER. There's a customer; and here's a state we're both in! (both rise) I'll go, mother.

MRS. P. (crossing at back, to L.). No, dear, I'll go; it won't look so strange to see a woman crying as a man.

PETER. Perhaps not. Say you've got the influenza.

MRS. P. Yes, yes. Sit down, Peter, and look on the best side of things. [Exit MRS. PROBITY, L.]

PETER. Well, if any one will be kind enough to point out to me which is the best side, that's the identical thing I should like to do. (crossing to R.) Affairs seem to me like a pane of glass with a hole in it—both sides alike.

GRACE. Surely, Mr. Chetty will not be harsh with John, even if the suspicion prove just?

PETER. Something tells me that mercy is no part of the stock-in-trade of Chetty, Fie & Company.

GRACE. I was this morning sent for to their office, and presented with a paper to sign—

PETER. A document!

GRACE. Renouncing John—but I refused.

PETER. Refused! Why refuse?

GRACE. I know nothing of law; but I was still under the impression that my father had been imposed upon. (aside) I cannot tell him now, that in my joy at believing John innocent, I had determined to become his, even though I renounced all; the hope is past, and forever! He need not know it.

PETER. Did Chetty—make any remark about—

GRACE. The money which you hold in your possession, Peter? Yes. (Peter turns away) Had we not better, for safety, place it in a banker's hand? You might be robbed of it.

PETER. Robbed! Yes—but wait a little longer, because—you see—investing—that is—depositing—takes a deal of time—and you—you don't understand business; you said you didn't just now.

GRACE. Do you think it safe, Peter?

PETER. Safe? Yes—it—oh, I can't. My child—my own darling Tot—it's gone—gone!

GRACE. Gone!

PETER. Gone! you're penniless! I've been robbed, and by that cruel, heartless boy! Don't look so pale, child; transport him if you like—me too! I've kept this dreadful secret till I feel as guilty as him.

GRACE. Merciful powers! I see it all!

PETER (leaning on chair, R. C.). Yes, that's the look I expected; you want revenge!—you're right! Why should I screen a villain because he happens to be my own flesh and blood?

GRACE. You cruelly wrong me, Peter; as there is a judge of the heart, my sole feeling is pity for you, my poor friend.

PETER (seated R. C.). You're a—a—I can't say what I would; it's here—a lot of words sticking in my throat.

GRACE. One thing must be done without a moment's delay; don't question me—don't grieve! I will leave you for awhile with your friend—the good conscience. (going; returns and kisses him.)

[Exit hurriedly, L.—bell heard.]

PETER. There's a girl who can find herself tumbled from independence to beggary, and yet give a word of comfort to the authors of her ruin.

Enter MRS. PROBITY from shop, L.

MRS. P. What a hurry Grace is in! I was serving the red-haired boy from number fifteen as she went, or—by-the-by, Peter, you'd served him with size instead of treacle.

PETER (R., sighs). I dare say I did! I'm not fit—we're neither of us fit. Have you been up to daddy lately?

MRS. P. Yes, poor old man; he seems as if he knew that something was wrong with us. He wanted to come down just now, but he was too weak to get to the stairs.

PETER. What a blessing to him now is the loss of his faculties!

MRS. P. Peter, did you see that sunshine that burst out just now?

PETER. I didn't notice it, old woman.

MRS. P. Oh, but I did, though, and it raised my spirits directly, for it seemed as much as to say, "Things may look brighter when you least expect it;" so I'm resolved to try and be cheerful to-day.

PETER. That's right, mother! If a good woman is a crown to her husband, when we married it was my coronation-day, and no mistake. We'll both try, shall us? We'll both try. Shall I try and sing?

MRS. P. Oh, no, Peter; I couldn't bear to hear you do that.

PETER. No; and what's more, I suspect I should make a mess of it. I'll tell you what I'll do; I'll plunge into the shop—bury myself in business. (crosses to L.)

MRS. P. (R.). And serve size instead of treacle, you foolish old man!

PETER. Well, we can't all have the sweets of life for asking. Ah! ah! does that sound like a joke, Patty?

MRS. P. Not much, Peter.

PETER. No; it's a failure! (shop bell rings) There's a customer—now for it! now to bury myself in the vast ocean of commerce—now to serve a ha'porth of lucifers.

As he goes to the door, L., enter CHARLES CHETTY. PETER goes up quickly and closes desk.

CHAS. Mr. Probity, good day. You see I am by no means ceremonious; I make bold to walk in uninvited.

PETER (getting at back to C.). Certainly, sir; I am generally to be found in my little sanctum sanctorum; I——

CHAS. (L.). You seem agitated. Why should my presence agitate you?

PETER (C.). I'm in trouble—I've been serving size instead of treacle—I'm in trouble, Mr. Charles.

CHAS. Ah! your son, too, gone! But I dare say, between ourselves, you know where he is to be found.

PETER. Don't trifle with me, sir, pray don't; you are a young man—a boy to me; but the time may come when a father's feelings won't be strangers to you.

MRS. P. (R.). And a mother's too!

PETER. Quiet, Patty; how can he be a mother?

CHAS. I'll make free to take a seat, since I wish to speak to you on business. (sits L. of table) Now, touching this money, which, a fortnight ago, you sold out of the three per cents.

PETER (sits R. of table and takes up account book). Excuse me, Mr. Charles, I'm taking stock to-day.

CHAS. It's inconvenient, no doubt, but after all, a matter of a few minutes. As the representative of my father, I demand to see the money; or, if you have reinvested it, as was proposed, the securities or legal vouchers.

MRS. P. (seated R.). Oh dear! oh dear!

PETER. Quiet, Patty! Mr. Chetty, I believe I am sole executor and trustee, am I not? Very well! I am not bound to satisfy you on that point.

CHAS. Very likely not. But suppose that the suspicious disappearance of your son, and your evasion of my demand, should give rise to painful conjectures as to complicity and fraud.

MRS. P. Dear! dear! What dreadful words!

PETER. Quiet, wife. (to CHARLES) If you suspect all that, sir, I must tell you that I know this much of the law, no one but Miss Emery can take proceedings.

CHAS. And you think she will not; we shall see. But I must remark that your last observation opens my eyes as to the character of the man I have to deal with.

PETER. I guess by that, sir, you mean I am a—rogue?

CHAS. You are, in every way, more acute than many would give you credit for.

PETER (rising and speaking across table). Thank you, sir! I'm sixty-one years of age, and this is the first time my legal knowledge has ever received such a compliment. I'm a rogue! (sits.)

CHAS. It is not unlikely that your aptitude for evasion may find a more public opportunity for development. A certain document was, by Mr. Emery's will, to be signed within one calendar month of his decease; now he died at half-past eleven, ante meridian. (looking at his watch) My father is by this time residuary legatee, with the option of taking proceedings which may place you in the criminal dock.

MRS. P. (falling on her knees to CHARLES). Oh, Mr. Charles, have mercy upon us!

PETER. Get up, Patty! I don't like to see that. (MRS. PROBITY rises) Mr. Charles Chetty, if you are in earnest in what you say, then heaven help me, or take me this day—for I cannot produce the money. (goes to SOLOMON'S chair.)

CHAS. And you offer no explanation: then Mr. Probity, the law must take its course. (rises.)

MRS. P. (crossing at back to CHARLES). Oh, sir! think what you do! the deaths of both of us will lie at your door! (shop bell rings.)

Enter GRACE EMERY, hurriedly, L.—she crosses to C.

GRACE. What is this? Mr. Chetty here? I thought as much.

PETER (coming down, C.). My girl—my child—Tot; you will not have me dragged to prison, will you? Who, who weaned you, who—

GRACE (R. C., to CHARLES). Sir, I have signed the document, and within the specified time. Once for all, I distinctly declare that Peter has had my consent to dispose of the money. (goes between PETER and MRS. PROBITY) Now, dare you repeat any intimidation to these honest people?

CHAS. Very well, Miss Emery, you seem to prefer ruin to a friend's interference. Still, in justice to myself, I must add, that unless proofs of the proper employment of the moneys in question are forthcoming, I must consider our engagement at an end.

GRACE. Not to hold you in suspense, pray consider it so in any case. My father's wish arose from a presupposed attachment; which, being false, the wish can have no claim upon my duty.

CHAS. You seem, Miss Emery, to warp sentences to your own wish, but legally they may prove less pliable than you anticipate. (to PETER) As for your son, Mr. Probity—(shop bell rings.)

PETER. My son! (he goes to door and speaks off) I don't know what you want, but we're out of it.

POSTMAN (without, L.). Post! Mr. P. Probity! (hands in a letter to PETER.)

PETER. Now—now it is here! my boy—news of my son!

MRS. P. (rushing to PETER). Oh, Peter—at last!

PETER (looking at letter with bitter disappointment). No—no—not his writing! (throws letter on table and sinks in chair R. of table) No news of my boy!

CHAS. (going up to PETER). Perhaps I can give you the latest intelligence of that young gentleman. He is, by this time, at the police office, a prisoner.

MRS. P. Our John, a prisoner?

PETER. A prisoner! A pris—o—ner?

CHAS. Why, Mr. Probity, could you for a moment imagine that we did not know where to place our hands upon him? A week ago we found proofs of fresh delinquencies, and he has just been brought from Liverpool in custody. (PETER, in agony, buries his face in his hands.)

MRS. P. Oh, sir, you must let us see him! He'll return all the money, and then you'll let him off, won't you? Give him a good talking to and let him go.

CHAS. There is no longer any brag of his extreme innocence, I perceive.

GRACE (R.). Mr. Chetty, I recall my ill-advised words, and entreat your mercy for my poor friends.

CHAS. Miss Emery, unless I am satisfied as to the safety of your legacy, I must on principle decline to interfere. (GRACE and MRS. PROBITY go up to PETER—shop bell heard.)

PETER. Ring away! I shall serve no more in this world! (goes up to SOLOMON'S chair.)

Enter SIFTER hurriedly, L.

SIFT. (L., aside to CHARLES). Mr. Chetty, junior; sir, if you please, a word with you.

CHAS. (aside to SIFTER). Is he arrived?

SIFT. Yes, but we've got on to another clue altogether; most unexpected discovery; quite a different party. We have liberated this Probity.

CHAS. Explain!

SIFT. I can't explain here; but you're wanted at the office; there's a confession.

CHAS. I'll come.

[Exit SIFTER, L.

(to GRACE) Miss Emery, my feelings are touched—really—a—old chandler in tears, and all that. For your sake, I'll see what can be done—and, in point of fact, do it. [Exit, L.

GRACE (R., to PETER). There, Peter, you hear what he says? Depend upon it, he will not prosecute.

PETER (coming down with GRACE, R. C.). There's a recorder's report in his face, my child. I've read such newspaper tragedies over my cup o' chicory; and Patty and I have wondered what the feelings of the parents must be. I'm let into the terrible secret.

GRACE (R.). Shall I go and try to see John?

MRS. P. (seated in chair, L. of fireplace). My good, kind angel, will you?

PETER (C.). Do, for her sake, Tot! I've always tried to soothe her troubles; but now I'm a Job's comforter. There she sits in his favorite chair; he'll never sit there again. (shop bell rings.)

Enter JOHN PROBITY, L., pale and agitated.

JOHN. Mother!

GRACE (R.). John! John!

MRS. P. He's there—restored to us; my boy! (rushes to JOHN and flings herself upon his neck. PETER falls back on chair, R. C.)

JOHN (L.). Look to my father!

GRACE (R.). He has fainted!—no—the shock has overcome him. Peter, look up! (PETER raises his eyes slowly.)

JOHN (after a pause). How you are altered!

PETER. Are we—altered? That's strange! We find ourselves dishonored—childless; for you are no son of mine; and it's a matter of surprise that we are altered!

MRS. P. (L. of table). But, he's here!—he's here! He will be a good boy, and restore all; won't you, John?

JOHN (L.). Restore all! I'm bewildered by your words. What is the meaning of all this? I have suffered the extreme of degradation; brought as a prisoner from Liverpool—released without explanation—I hasten for comfort to my home, and find such expressions on your lips.

PETER. Patty, come away from him! (pulls her across to R.) The money, sir! the money! That girl's money which was in the desk! Can you restore it to her?

JOHN. I—I restore it! Is it then lost?

PETER. Boy, no trifling! Let the sight of our misery put hypocrisy to shame.

JOHN. Hypocrisy! What, in the name of all that's just, do you demand?

PETER (in a paroxysm of rage). All that's just! Hear him! As your disgraced parent I might demand, who taught you to stab your poor old father and mother to the heart? But I demand only justice to this poor girl. To us your conduct has been such, that mine wouldn't be more unnatural if I forgot you were my own flesh and blood, and throttled a confession out of you—same as I would out of any other robber! but—(suddenly changing) No!—no!—no! Now I look in your face, the old and happy times come back!—my John—my boy—my boy! you'll do something to save your father? If not for my sake (for children grow up to love the mother best—it's natural) tell all for her sake! Look at her! I implore you to tell the whole truth! (about to kneel, JOHN prevents him.)

JOHN. My poor father! I glean from your terrible words that you have been robbed; but is it possible that you suspect me?

PETER. Ha! ha! He won't acknowledge it. I see he's hardened—stone—(goes up.)

MRS. P. (L.). Don't be so harsh with him, Peter; look at his poor pale face.

GRACE (R.). The night you left, John, all the money which my father bequeathed to me was abstracted from that desk.

JOHN. Grace!

PETER. Your letter! hypocrite! Your letter acknowledged the crime.

JOHN. My letter! (considering a moment) Oh, you have fearfully misconstrued my words; I only alluded to Grace; how shall I convince you? How can I give some instant proof of my innocence?

SOLOMON appears on the stairs, R., slowly descending.

PETER. Here comes a witness of your guilt; your old grandfather babbled of the money you—you took from the desk!

JOHN. Money! My own money! Ah! I see, everything has turned to evidence against me. (runs to SOLOMON, who is coming down stairs, R.) Grandfather!

SOL. (on stairs). John! fine lad! Where's my hankeycher?

JOHN. Speak, dear grandfather; do you know anything of the money—(impressively) money in this desk? (goes to desk and places his hand upon it.)

SOL. It's not safe there—hide it! hide it!

PETER (in front, C.). Ah!

JOHN. Where, grandfather, where? (to others) Hush! for mercy's sake!

SOL. Lot's o' thieves! Hide it!

JOHN. Yes! yes! Hide it—where—where?

SOL. (in a loud whisper to JOHN). The—the chimney—ah! ah! the chimney corner. (JOHN and PETER rush to the fireplace, JOHN thrusts his arm up the chimney.)

JOHN. No! it's not there!

PETER (who has thrust his head right up, brings down the box) Here! here! ah! ah! as I'm a living man; thank Providence, here—here it is! (an exclamation of joy from all, PETER rushes forward with the box, falls overpowered, recovers and flings himself on JOHN's breast) My wronged boy, I ask your pardon! say you pardon me, or I shall choke!

JOHN (L. C.). My dear father!

MRS. P. (up L.). I knew he was innocent all the while!

PETER. Did you, old woman? Well, never mind; stick to that! (gives box to GRACE, who places it on table) There, Tot, I never want to be sole executor and trustee to a heiress again, I can tell you. Grandfather, let me help you to your chair. (as he leads SOLOMON up) Ah, my Solomon, you little guess what we have suffered through your wisdom.

JOHN (L. C.). So, father, have I profited so ill by your honest example, that you should suspect me?

PETER (coming down, R. C.). John, look me full in the face; now, say you have never been dishonest—never forged a lock—checked a forge—I mean forged a check?

JOHN. Never!

PETER (watching JOHN's countenance, after a pause). I believe you! (shaking his hand with feeling) All will yet be well! drop the subject. My heart's thumping like a gold-beater's mallet. (shop bell rings; goes to door L. and looks off) Two customers. (speaks off) Help yourselves to what you like; never mind the money this time! (returns to C) Who'd think that a chandler, with such a crime as mine upon his head, could be so disgustingly light-hearted?

JOHN (R. C.). Your crime?

PETER (L. c.). The crime of suspecting my boy! Now, you're a scholar; did you ever read, in ancient history, of any noble Roman, or other backwoodsman, thrashing his father?

JOHN. No!

PETER. Then I wish you'd thrash me, and let the fact be handed down to posterity as a remarkable president of British retribution.

GRACE (R.). John, how unkind—how unjust have been my thoughts towards you; I feel as though my whole life ought to be devoted to atonement.

SOL. (at back). John ought to marry that girl. Where's my hankey-cloth?

PETER (c.). Now, Tot, my own child, don't say anything too kind; hopes are soon raised, and when I think of poor John's letter—by-the-by, talking of a letter, I can read this now; I'd quite forgotten it. (takes letter from the table and reads the seal) "Llanfrothy Copper Mine Company." Oh, drat 'em! another call, I suppose. Well, it'll save me from a fit of joyful hysterics. (opens letter and reads) "Sir,—Pleasure to inform you—struck on a rich lode—shares now at forty.—Amos Tupper, Secretary." Holloa! here's luck! I've got eighty of 'em! Eighty times forty. Why, I'm a Rothschild!

MRS. P. (L.). I always said it was a good spec!

PETER. Did you, old woman? Well, stick to that. You shan't be long without crinoline, and a "more antique" frock! (shop bell rings) Go to the opposition shop; we're getting sarcy and independent!

Enter CHARLES CHETTY and SIFTER, L.

CHAS. (L.). Mr. Probity, I have come to do an act of justice.

PETER. What?

CHAS. I have come to do an act of justice.

PETER. Go it! Novelty forever!

CHAS. Our suspicions of your son, as far as the frauds in our office are concerned, were erroneous.

SIFT. (L.). The little mistake was mine; the bona fide culprit is Joseph Trevor!

JOHN (R.). My fellow clerk!

MRS. P. (behind table, L. c.). I always said it was the clerk!

PETER (c.). Did you, mother? Well, stick to that. (to SIFTER) Mr. Boney Fidey, or whatever your name is, in return for your little mistake, I shall content myself by showing you the door. I could afford to kick you out, but my godfather was a north countryman, and I shall omit that ceremony, out of respect to Scotland Yard.

SIFT. Touching the potash and soda.

PETER. Get out! (exit SIFTER, L. PETER slams the door after him—bell—returns to L. c.) Now, Mr. Charles, you threw it in my teeth that we bragged too much of our honesty; it appears that Brag's a good dog, after all.

CHAS. Respecting Miss Emery's capital—

PETER. That's a capital joke; it's here—you can see it if you like.

CHAS. Indeed! I'm glad to hear it, for it looked rather black!

PETER. It was in a black-looking place. (crosses to c.) Wasn't it, Tot?

CHAS. (L.). Then I should wish a few words privately with Grace.

PETER. So should I. (taking JOHN and GRACE up the stage, c.) Patty, amuse Mr. Chetty for a minute or two. (MRS. PROBITY goes down, R. c.)

SOL. (seated at back). A young shark was caught in ninety-one.

CHAS. (aside). I should like to strangle that old hippopotamus. (to MRS. PROBITY, confidentially) Now, between ourselves, in point of fact, where was this money deposited?

MRS. P. (mysteriously). Up the flue!

CHAS. (indignant). I asked a civil question, madam; I don't require your chandler-shop jokes.

PETER. That's settled! not another word! (coming down with JOHN and GRACE) Mr. Chetty, the chandler's going to do something magnanimous. We have come to the resolution that the money shall pass into your family.

CHAS. How d'ye mean?

PETER. If Grace marries my boy, she'll forfeit about two thousand. (with assumed pomposity) I will make that trifle up to her.

CHAS. You! ha! ha!

PETER. Yes, sir, me, ha! ha! (pompously) Out of my property, which lies in the mining districts, and which will easily—(suddenly turning, sees SOLOMON at table with his hands on the cash-box; runs to him) No, you don't—not this time. (takes the box from him.)

SOL. (at back of table). The lawyers will get it—hide it! hide it!

PETER (coming down with cash-box). This shall be paid over to the firm of Chetty & Co., as soon as Tot becomes Mrs. John Probity.

JOHN (R., to CHARLES). And I wish you may soon get it!

PETER (C.). There's a sublime sentiment! He wishes you may get it! and (pointing to GRACE) there's a blush that puts a crimson seal to that codicil.

CHAS. Enough of such rubbish! (looking at his watch) I have an appointment. I am sorry that you have made yourself look so ridiculous; but, in point of fact—a—good-bye. [Exit, L. door.]

SOL. (at back of table). Has he had his gruel?

PETER. Patty, the sun's burst out now; one is never too old to learn. (to JOHN and GRACE) My children, whatever trouble you may fall into, let conscience be with you another word for hope. (shop bell rings) Coming! but I want to say a word or two to my best customers, because they may be running away with the idea that having come into property in the mining districts, I intend giving up business. (to audience) If you hear such a report, oblige me by contradicting it, will you? As long as you patronize our little shop, you'll find me here, dealing in a variety of articles, from allspice (of which I know you to be first-rate judges) to soft soap, and I hope you'll not find your money is lost when you've had a look at "The Chimney Corner!"

		SOL. (at back).
R.	GRACE.	JOHN.	PETER.	MRS. P.
				L.

CURTAIN.

DE WITT'S ETHIOPIAN AND COMIC DRAMA.

“ Let those laugh now who never laughed before,
And those who always laughed now laugh the more.”

Nothing so thorough and complete in the way of Ethiopian and Comic Dramas has ever been printed as those that appear in the following list. Not only are the plots excellent, the characters droll, the incidents funny, the language humorous, but all the situations, by-play, positions, pantomimic business, scenery, and tricks are so plainly set down and clearly explained, that the merest novice could put any of them on the stage. Included in this catalogue are all the most laughable and effective pieces of their class ever produced.

 In ordering, please copy the figures at the commencement of each play, which indicate the number of the piece in “DE WITT'S ETHIOPIAN AND COMIC DRAMA.”

 Any of the following plays sent, postage free, on receipt of price—
15 Cents Each. Address,

CLINTON T. DE WITT,

No. 33 Rose Street, New York.

 The figures in the columns indicate the number of characters—M. male, F. female.

No.	M. F.	No.	M. F.
73. African Box, burlesque, 2 scene	5 0	95. Dutch Justice, sketch, 1 scene	11 0
107. Africanus Bluebeard, musical Ethiopian burlesque	6 2	67. Editor's Troubles, farce, 1 sce.	6 0
43. Baby Elephant, sketch, 2 scene	7 1	4. Eh ? What is It ? sketch	4 1
79. Barney's Courtship, musical interlude, 1 act	1 1	98. Elopement (The), farce, 1 scene	4 1
42. Bad Whiskey, sketch, 1 scene.	2 1	52. Excise Trials, sketch, 1 scene.	10 1
6. Black Coap from Whitechapel, negro piece	4 0	25. Fellow that Looks Like Me, interlude, 1 scene	2 1
10. Black Caesar, sketch, 1 scene	3 0	51. Fisherman's Luck, 1 scene	2 0
11. Black-eyed William, sketch, 2 scenes	4 1	88. First Night (The), Dutch farce, 1 act	4 2
40. Big Mistake, sketch, 1 scene	4 0	106. Gambrius, King of Lager Beer, Ethiopian burlesque	8 1
78. Bogus Indian, sketch, 4 scenes	5 2	83. German Emigrant (The), sketch 1 scene	2 3
89. Bogus Talking Machines (The) farce, 1 scene	4 0	77. Getting Square on the Call Boy, sketch, 1 scene	3 0
24. Bruised and Cured, sketch, 1 scene	2 0	17. Ghost (The), sketch, 1 act	2 0
108. Charge of the Hash Brigade, Irish musical sketch	2 2	58. Ghost in a Pawnshop, 1 scene.	4 0
35. Coal Heaver's Revenge, negro sketch, 1 scene	6 0	31. Glycerine Oil, sketch	3 0
41. Cremation, sketch, 2 scenes	8 1	20. Going for the Cup, interlude	4 0
12. Daguerreotypes, sketch, 1 scene	3 0	82. Good Night's Rest, 1 scene	3 0
53. Danton and Pythias, burlesque, 2 scenes	5 1	86. Gripsack, sketch, 1 scene	3 0
63. Darkey's Stratagem, 1 act	3 1	70. Guide to the Stage, sketch	3 0
110. De Black Magician, Ethiopian comicality, 1 scene	4 2	61. Happy Couple, 1 scene	2 1
111. Deeds of Darkness, Ethiopian extravaganza, 1 act	6 1	23. Hard Times, extravaganza, 1 scene	5 1
50. Draft (The), sketch, 1 act	6 0	3. Hemmed In, sketch	3 1
64. Dutchman's Ghost, 1 scene	4 1	48. High Jack, the Heeler, 1 scene	6 0
		68. Hippotheatron, sketch	9 0
		71. In and Out, sketch, 1 scene	2 0
		33. Jealous Husband, sketch	2 1
		94. Julius, the Snoozer, 3 scenes	7 0

DE WITT'S ETHIOPIAN AND COMIC DRAMA (Continued).

No.	M. F.	No.	M. F.
103. Katrina's Little Game, Dutch act, 1 scene	1 2	39. Wanted, a Nurse, 1 scene.....	4 0
1. Last of the Mohicans, sketch..	3 1	75. Weston the Walkist, Dutch sketch, 1 scene.....	7 1
36. Laughing Gas, sketch, 1 scene.	6 1	93. What Shall I Take? farce, 1 act	8 1
18. Live Injun, sketch, 4 scenes....	4 1	29. Who Died First? 1 scene. . .	3 1
61. Lost Will, sketch	4 0	97. Who's the Actor? farce, 1 scene.....	4 0
37. Lucky Job, farce, 2 scenes....	3 2	93. Wrong Woman in the Right Place, sketch, 2 scenes.....	2 2
90. Lunatic (The), farce, 1 scene..	3 0	85. Young Scamp, sketch, 1 scene.	3 0
39. Making a Hit, farce, 2 scenes .	4 0	112. The Coming Man, sketch, 1 act	2 1
19. Malicious Trespass, 1 scene....	3 0	113. Ambition, farce, 2 scenes.....	7 0
96. Midnight Intruder (The), farce, 1 scene	6 1	114. One Night in a Medical College, sketch, 1 scene	7 1
101. Mollie Moriarty, Irish musical sketch, 1 scene	1 1	115. Private Boarding, comedy, 1 scene.....	5 1
8. Mutton Trial, sketch, 2 scenes	4 0	116. Zacharias' Funeral, farce, 1 scene	5 0
44. Musical Servant, sketch, 1 sce.	3 0	117. Motor Bellows, comedy, 1 scene
49. Night in a Strange Hotel, sketch, 1 scene.....	2 0	119. Ulen's Funny Babies, burlesque	6 0
22. Obeying Orders, sketch 1 scene	2 1	119. My Wife's Visitors, comic drama, 1 scene.....	6 1
27. One Hundredth Night of Hamlet, sketch	7 1	120. Body Snatchers (The), Negro sketch, 2 scenes.....	3 1
50. One Night in a Barroom, sketch.....	7 0	121. Stocks Up! Stocks Down! Negro farce, 1 scene.....	2 0
70. One, Two, Three, 1 scene.....	7 0	122. Ticket Taker, Negro farce, 1 scene.....	2 0
87. Pete and the Peddler, Negro and Irish sketch, 1 scene	2 3	123. The Intelligence Office, Ethiopian sketch, 1 scene.....	2 1
9. Policy Players, sketch, 1 scene	7 0	124. Deaf as a Post, Ethiopian sketch, 1 scene.....	2 0
57. Pompey's Patients, interlude, 2 scenes	6 0	125. Oh, Hush! Negro Operatic Olio, 3 scenes.....	4 1
65. Porter's Troubles, 1 scene.....	6 1	126. Black Statue, Negro farce, 1 scene.....	4 2
66. Port Wine vs. Jealousy, sketch	2 1	127. Blinks and Jinks, Ethiopian sketch, 1 scene.....	3 1
91. Painter's Apprentice (The), farce, 1 scene	5 0
92. Polar Bear (The), 1 scene.	4 1
14. Recruiting Office, sketch, 1 act.	5 0
45. Remittance from Home, sketch, 1 scene	6 0
105. Rehearsal (The), Irish farce, 2 scenes.....	4 2
55. Rigging a Purchase, sketch, 1 scene	3 0
81. Rival Artists, sketch, 1 scene.	3 0
26. Rival Tenants, sketch	4 0
15. Sam's Courtship, farce, 1 act..	2 1
59. Sausage Makers, 2 scenes.....	5 1
60. Scenes on the Mississippi, 2 scenes	6 0
21. Scampini, pantomime, 2 scenes	6 3
84. Serenade(The), sketch, 2 scenes	7 0
38. Siamese Twins, 2 scenes.....	5 0
74. Sleep Walker, sketch, 2 scenes	3 0
46. Slippery Day, sketch, 1 scene.	6 1
69. Squire for a Day, sketch.....	5 1
56. Stage-struck Couple, 1 scene..	2 1
72. Stranger, burlesque, 1 scene... and 2 children.	1 2
7. Stupid Servant, sketch, 1 scene	2 0
13. Streets of New York, 1 scene .	6 0
16. Storming the Fort, 1 scene....	5 0
47. Take it, Don't Take It, 1 scene	2 0
51. Them Papers, sketch, 1 scene.	3 0
100. Three Chiefs (The), 2 scenes ..	6 0
102. Three A. M., sketch, 2 scenes.	3 1
34. Three Strings to One Bow, sketch, 1 scene	4 1
2. Tricks, sketch	5 2
101. Two Awfuls (The), 1 scene....	5 0
5. Two Black Roses, sketch	4 1
28. Uncle Eph's Dream, 2 scenes .	3 1
62. Vinegar Bitters, sketch, 1 scene	6 1
22. Wake Up, William Henry. . .	3 0

DE WITT'S ACTING PLAYS (Continued).

No.	M. F.	No.	M. F.
144. Lancashire Lass, melodrama, 5 acts.12	3	61. Plot and Passion, drama, 3 acts....	7 2
134. Larkins' Love Letters, farce, 1 act..	3 2	138. Poll and Partner Joe, burlesque, 1
137. L'Article 47, drama, 3 acts.....11	5	act.....	10 3
111. Liar (The), comedy, 2 acts.....	7 2	110. Poppleton's Predicaments, farce, 1	3 6
119. Life Chase, drama, 5 acts.....14	5	50. Porter's Knot, drama, 2 acts.....	8 2
165. Living Statue (The), farce, 1 act....	3 2	59. Post Boy, drama, 2 acts.....	5 3
48. Little Annie's Birthday, farce, 1 act.	2 4	95. Pretty Horse-Breaker, farce, 1 act..	3 10
32. Little Rebel, farce, 1 act.....	4 3	181 and 182. Queen Mary, drama, 4 acts.38	8
164. Little Ruby, drama, 3 acts.....	6 6	157. Quite at Home, comedietta, 1 act....	5 2
109. Locked In, comedietta, 1 act.....	2 2	196. Queerest Courtship (The), comic op
85. Locked In with a Lady, sketch, 1 act.	1 1	eretta, 1 act.....	1 1
87. Locked Out, comic scene.....	1 2	132. Race for a Dinner, farce, 1 act.....	10
143. Lodgers and Dodgers, farce, 1 act..	4 2	185. Richelieu, play, 5 acts.....	16 2
159. Leap Year, musical duality, 1 act...	1 1	38. Rightful Heir, drama, 5 acts.....	10 2
163. Marcorette, drama, 3 acts.....	10 3	77. Roll of the Drum, drama, 3 acts....	8 4
154. Maria and Magdalena, play, 4 acts.	8 6	13. Ruy Blas, drama, 4 acts.....	12 4
63. Marriage at Any Price, farce, 1 act.	5 3	194. Rum, drama, 3 acts.....	7 4
39. Master Jones' Birthday, farce, 1 act.	4 4	195. Rosemi Shell, travesty, 1 act, 4
7. Maud's Peril, drama, 4 acts.....	5 3	scenes.....	6 3
49. Midnight Watch, drama, 1 act.....	8 2	158. School, comedy, 4 acts.....	6 6
15. Milky White, drama, 2 acts.....	4 2	79. Sheep in Wolf's Clothing, drama, 1	7 5
46. Miriam's Crime, drama, 3 acts.....	5 2	37. Silent Protector, farce, 1 act.....	3 2
51. Model of a Wife, farce, 1 act.....	3 2	35. Silent Woman, farce, 1 act.....	2 1
184. Money, comedy, 5 acts.....	17 3	43. Sisterly Service, comedietta, 1 act..	7 2
108. Mr. Scroggins, farce, 1 act.....	3 3	6. Six Months Ago, comedietta, 1 act.	2 1
188. Mr. X., farce, 1 act.....	3 3	11. Snapping Turtles, dialogue, 1 act..	1 1
169. My Uncle's Suit, farce, 1 act.....	4 1	26. Society, comedy, 3 acts.....	16 5
130. My Wife's Diary, farce, 1 act.....	3 1	78. Special Performances, farce, 1 act..	7 3
92. My Wife's Out, farce, 1 act.....	2 2	31. Taming a Tiger, farce, 1 act.....	3
193. My Walking Photograph, musical		150. Tell-Tale Heart, comedietta, 1 act..	1 2
duality, 1 act.....	1 1	120. Tempest in a Teapot, comedy, 1 act.	2 1
140. Never Reckon Your Chickens, etc.,		146. There's no Smoke Without Fire,
farce, 1 act.....	3 4	comedietta, 1 act.....	1 2
115. New Men and Old Acres, comedy, 3	8 5	83. Thrice Married, personation piece,
2. Nobody's Child, drama, 3 acts.....	8 3	1 act.....	6 1
57. Noemie, drama, 2 acts.....	4 4	42. Time and the Hour, drama, 3 acts..	7 3
104. No Name, drama, 5 acts.....	7 5	27. Time and Tide, drama, 3 acts and
112. Not a Bit Jealous, farce, 1 act.....	3 3	prologue.....	7 5
185. Not So Bad as We Seem, play, 5 acts.14	3	133. Timothy to the Rescue, farce, 1 act.	4 2
84. Not Guilty, drama, 4 acts.....	10 6	153. 'Tis Better to Live than to Die,
117. Not Such a Fool as He Looks, drama,		farce, 1 act.....	2 1
3 acts.....	5 4	134. Tompkins the Troubadour, farce, 1	3 2
171. Nothing Like Paste, farce, 1 act....	3 1	29. Turning the Tables, farce, 1 act....	5 3
14. No Thoroughfare, drama, 5 acts and		168. Tweedie's Rights, comedy, 2 acts..	4 2
prologue.....	13 6	136. Twice Killed, farce, 1 act.....	6 3
173. Off the Stage, comedietta, 1 act....	3 3	56. Two Gay Deceivers, farce, 1 act....	3
176. On Bread and Water, farce, 1 act..	1 2	123. Two Polts, farce, 1 act.....	4 4
90. Only a halfpenny, farce, 1 act.....	2 2	198. Twin Sisters (The), comic operetta,
170. Only Somebody, farce, 1 act.....	4 2	1 act.....	3 1
33. One too Many for Him, farce, 1 act.	2 3	162. Uncle's Will, comedietta, 1 act....	2 1
3. £100,000, comedy, 3 acts.....	8 4	106. Up for the Cattle Show, farce, 1 act.	6 2
97. Orange Blossoms, comedietta, 1 act.	3 3	81. Vandyke Brown, farce, 1 act.....	3 3
66. Orange Girl, drama, in prologue		124. Volunteer Review, farce, 1 act....	6 6 and 3 acts.....	18 4	91. Walpole, comedy, 3 acts.....	7 2
172. Ours, comedy, 3 acts.....	6 3	118. Wanted, a Young Lady, farce, 1 act.	3
94. Our Clerks, farce, 1 act.....	7 5	44. War to the Knife, comedy, 3 acts....	5 4
45. Our Domestic, comedy farce, 2 acts	6 6	105. Which of the Two? comedietta, 1 act	2 10
155. Our Heroes, military play, 5 acts..	24 5	98. Who is Who? farce, 1 act.....	3 2
178. Out at Sea, drama in prologue and		12. Widow Hunt, comedy, 3 acts.....	4 4
4 acts.....	16 5	5. William Tell with a Vengeance,
147. Overland Route, comedy, 3 acts....	11 5	burlesque.....	8 2
156. Peace at Any Price, farce, 1 act....	1 1	136. Woman in Red, drama, 3 acts and
82. Peep o' Day, drama, 4 acts.....	12 4	prologue.....	6
127. Peggy Green, farce, 1 act.....	3 10	161. Woman's Vows and Mason's Oaths,
23. Petticoat Parliament, extravaganza,		4 acts.....	10 4
in one act.....	15 24	11. Woodcock's Little Game, farce, 2	4 4
62. Photographic Fix, farce, 1 act....	3 2	54. Young Collegian (Cantab.), farce, 1	3 3

A COMPLETE DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE

of DE WITT'S ACTING PLAYS AND DE WITT'S

ETHIOPIAN AND COMIC DRAMAS, containing Plot, Costume, Scenery,

Time of Representation and every other information, mailed free and post paid

An Indispensable Book for Amateurs.

HOW TO MANAGE

AMATEUR THEATRICALS.

Being plain instructions for construction and arrangement of Stage, making Scenery, getting up Costumes, "Making Up" to represent different ages and characters, and how to produce stage Illusions and Effects. Also hints for the management of Amateur Dramatic Clubs, and a list of pieces suitable for Drawing Room Performances. Handsomely illustrated with Colored Plates.

Price, 25 Cents.

DE WITT'S SELECTIONS

FOR

AMATEUR AND PARLOR THEATRICALS.

Nos. 1 and 2.

Being choice selections from the very best Dramas, Comedies and Farces. Specially adapted for presentation by Amateurs, and for Parlor and Drawing Room Entertainments.

Price, 25 Cents.

Other Numbers of this Series will soon follow.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

0 014 458 084 9